DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTICS

Distinctions between levels in the Manager job classification series may be based on many factors, including the complexity of business functions within department(s) or division(s), decision-making responsibility and level of supervision exercised, nature and complexity of work performed by employees supervised, size of the budget, and scope of duties. Examples of business functions include human resources, accounting and finance, and payroll. Managers at the senior levels typically are responsible for 1) supervising a large number of employees, 2) overseeing large budgets, 3) managing highly specialized employees, 4) managing a complex department or division, and/or 5) overseeing the daily operations of more than one business function, department, or division. Incumbents in this series typically report to a director level or higher, although staff-level managers may report to higher-level managers.
